SALMON MEASURES, AS MEASURED

TWENTY-THREE OREGON COUNTIES YIELD OVER 19,000 MAJORITY FOR THE HONEST FISH BILL RECENTLY SUBMITTED TO THE PEOPLE—TEN COUNTIES YET TO HEAR FROM.

Returns from 23 counties of Oregon on the electoral status of the two fish bills recently before the people for treatment, made direct to Hon. Herman Wise, of this city, who as chairman of the local committee in charge of the interests here of the bill (No. 332-333) to correct and save the salmon industry from annihilation, shows conclusively the splendid success of the propaganda arranged and worked from here and against the tricks and turpitude of the gang that have done their best (and worst) to retain their deadly hold on the deadlier fish-wheels:

Table with 3 columns: County, Fish-Wheel Bill (318, Yes), Protection Bill (319, No), and Protection Bill (333, No). Rows include Columbia, Yamhill, Marion, Clatsop, Multnomah, Polk, Umatilla, Morrow, Grant, Malheur, Wasco, Sherman, Washington, Benton, Gilliam, Lincoln, Josephine, Tillamook, Clackamas, Union (14 precincts), and Lane.

These with majorities, as follows: In Douglas county for the fish-wheel bill, of 882; and in Baker county, for the fish-wheel bill of 636, and the protection bill, of 1001, with some slight changes in the Clatsop official count, which leaves the protection bill about 39 better off than first reported, leaves the latter measure in the enjoyment for an actual majority, so far, of 19,877, and a majority over the affirmative vote of the up-river bill, of just 15,463, with only one big county (Linn) to hear from, and the prospect is good for a major record of 20,000 when all votes are counted.

Apropos of these totals it may not be amiss to remind the Oregonian that its quotations of the Benton county vote on the fish bills, as printed on page 9 of yesterday's issue, are completely transposed, whether intentionally, or not, and the count given the protection bill is credited to the fish-wheel interests, which is bad reporting, to say the least of it; the status of the vote as now returned from these 23 counties being: Fish-wheel bill, Yes, 33,560, No, 29,146; majority, 4,414. Protection bill, Yes, 41,679, No, 21,802; majority 19,877.

THE ASTORIA FLOAT AT PORTLAND

WAS EASILY THE BEST IN ENTIRE PARADE—WILL BE BROUGHT HERE FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION.

"The Astoria float was in the opinion of everyone who saw it the best put up by any town in the State," said Manager Whyte of the Chamber of Commerce who has returned from the Pacific Coast Admen's Convention held at Portland during the Rose Carnival. "There were so many Astoria people present that the cheers this float received practically drowned out all the other cheers."

The ninety or more delegates to the Pacific Coast Admen's Association were seated on the grandstand in a body and as the float passed they joined in a chorus of cheers led by Mr. Whyte and a great noise was made something like a herd of hogs in a railroad wreck. Most of the people stopped looking at the parade and began looking at the noise. As a description of the float, it may be said that it was an allegory typifying the gateway of the Columbia River. The setting sun was used in the design for each side of the double gate, while the posts were monstrous ear-horses that reared their heads as high in the air as the telegraph and trolley wires would permit. In the mouths of these monsters across the gate, far above it, was carried a huge key, being a duplicate of that worn as the Chamber of Commerce official pin.

Far back of the gate was a high billow on which was seated Neptune with long waving white hair and hisker armed with a fierce trident. Miss Louise Wise occupied the seat of honor on the float dressed in a fine white costume especially prepared for the occasion and representing her as a graceful sea nymph.

Just in front of Miss Wise was a miniature fishing boat in which was seated Carl Thomas who together with Miss Wise have recently occupied prominent positions in the high school debating team. Mr. Thomas was dressed in a typical fisherman's costume. On the sails of the fishing boat were painted scenes familiar to those acquainted with the country near the mouth of the river.

The Fourth of July committee has already arranged to bring the float to Astoria and use it in their celebration. Other towns which had excellent floats were The Dalles, Hood River, Medford and Yamhill county.

Mr. Whyte says that he has never seen a convention better cared for than the Admen's Convention in Portland. The street car companies even went to the trouble of issuing special pass books so that no delegate paid street car fare during the entire convention of four days. Mr. Freeman who has charge of the Oaks prepared an elaborate entertainment at that popular resort and every show in the grounds was literally turned over to the admen, their wives and sweethearts during an entire evening of frolic and fun.

The promotion bill which has been proposed by the Astoria Chamber of Commerce was given most favorable consideration by the advertising men and in fact it was considered the popular and proper move to make in order that Oregon may speedily reach the head of the procession in all industrial development work. Several public men of the state who were in attendance on the convention expressed themselves as believing the measure will become a law.

Astoria particularly attracted attention before the Admen's Convention through the recent circular issued on transportation and through the publicity given to the chemical experiments now being carried on in this city by Dr. Hawley of the Forest service who is now determining the volatile oils and other bi-products of the stumps, leaves and limbs of the forests of this section. Should Dr. Hawley deem it wise there will probably be no difficulty in securing an appropriation from the legislature to put up a large laboratory here, one to use retorts and in that may thoroughly work out the details of the stump problem for all time.

Another matter which has brought Astoria prominently before the Admen's Convention was the story published in "Printer's Ink" of issue of May 20th, on page 32, in which was a fine cut of the photograph recently taken of the officers of the Chamber of Commerce showing the pile of 12,000 envelopes received from every nation in the world.
